

Something and Nothing

Inspired by the deep philosophical (and sundry other such adjectives) ruminations of a semi-perplexed RedRoom colleague. If nought plus one is one And nought times one is nought, The answer seems quite logical, It doesn't leave me fraught. And one divided by itself's Still one our teachers claim, How come that when you multiply The answer's just the ...

read more